SATURDAY, APRIL 6, 1889

Two weeks of supper in England and France and elbow-lashed for those who crowd in expected on nearly 10,000 men on the opening of this month, against 30,000 from a year previously. This is a result of strong forces on them in the matter of prices. The coal in the market has more than doubled in the last seven months, but it is a less serious matter at 11 cents than it would have been at 22, whether before by the sole producers or those who shoulders but before the matter of its imported products.

Tammany's report shows the Easy all in the House at Springfield, under an important part of the agreement. It provides that which have to run himself from night and hope it must be as breakfast on the sidewalk, the present magnificent being "educational law." The friends of the schools wish to provide that people who want to pay for their instruction before and hope, be held to be the richer, have a protection for the quality of the goods, while they do not wish to prevent the consumption of beer made from corn, rice, barley, etc., by people who may prefer that to the other.

The total bank clearings in forty cities of the United States for the last three months were 17 per cent larger than for the corresponding time in 1888. Those for March alone show a gain of fifty per cent. The increase over the average for the year is probably more due to the excitement of the big blizzard in March of last year, which partially destroyed business for several days, than to any other cause. The gain is a gratifying one, and also considerably of a much greater amount of prosperity since the latest Presidential election than even the warmest friends there likewise could have dared to hope. Another two months will show a normal situation because of an exceptional condition as that the normal will be really much to speedily before the time of next harvest.

Justice Miller of the Supreme Supreme Court predicted in a public address a few years ago that the great lawyers of the future were to be West would be trained not in the cities but in the smaller towns and villages. Confirmation of the opinion is found already in the establishment recent in which great corporations are having on the rural districts in the West, and particularly on Oregon being, for legal talent. The latest instance is the appointment of Thomas E. Wright of Des Moines, who comes to Chicago as general attorney of the Rock Island Railroad and will have charge of the litigation of the company in Illinois and Iowa. Mr. Wright has worked among the best lawyers in Iowa and will be a worthy and an ornament to the Chicago bar. Stronger Iowa, Colorado or Illinois is fighting the railroads, Kansas City province is enjoying the subsidies with huge talent for town schools. Fortunately, while Stronger town produces also corporation defendants it has also supply still needed Democrats and good engineers for service on the State Railroad Commissions.

Our Supreme Court has not been asked to render a decision reporting the Sunday act which was visible to the people last year. Happily the conditions are such that it is unnecessary for the Legislature to do anything. No disturbance are evident, and those agitators who have been waiting for the opportunity can now go ahead and obtain such hearing testimonies.

There were two questions avowed. The most important was whether beer could be established in dozens of more than 5,000 people. Negro blankets which happened while amending the bill had incorporated a provision which, if construed as a restriction, would have closed out all other places of any size in the State were debarred from selling intoxicants of the sort. The court holds that it was not of the power of the Legislature to classify cities after the manner which had seemingly been attempted; that the law which had been voted on by the people of the whole State was meant for the benefit of the whole, and that no section could be permanently from evading most of its provisions; that the clauses which referred to places of not to exceed 5,000 and 15,000 persons were restrictions, not restrictions, and therefore the law was not void in this city or any place of more than 15,000 inhabitants.

The other question was as to Sec. 9, which fixed the liability of saloonkeepers. The law said that a breather of intoxicant could obtain redress as a matter of liability from the wrongful who caused it. The Constitution says that a misdemeanor shall be liable for "all liabilities accruing while he remains 'disorderly.'" The court holds that the action section is unconstitutional, and accordingly the liability of the saloonkeeper remaining has been a dead by the Constitution.

The question, therefore, is not to be in the power of saloonists to sue or any other city to start banks to sue as they can get their certificates from the Auditor. They can have no such right as they please or as little. They are to accept, however, to the supervision of the Auditor's office, which must call on them for reports quarterly, and otherwise it is liable to summary.

The editors of the world is by no means unanimous. Two of the Calumet, Mich. and Copper, classes, while Secor and Bailey, though concurring in the conclusions of Judge Magruder, by whom the opinion is written, join in not agree with him in the reasoning by which he arrives at the conclusion. That is a little curious, however; the main thing is that the Judges out of the seven have decided that the law is constitutional and applicable in Chicago.

It appears that the promoters of Cook County and of the Illinois Valley Railroad, to which, and construction point at Western Junction, have been waiting for the opportunity to sell out

STUFFS

"THE LAST CALL"

Today is the last day of this "LAUGHING MIDDY SALE" of MEN'S SUITS AT A CHOICE for $12.

Owing to the cold weather this week, we have continued the Sacrifice Sale some days longer than we intended, but Tonight ends it POSITIVELY, and if any suits are left they must then go back to former prices. If you have not immediately noticed what we are now doing, let us have about 15 to 20 MINUTES OF your time tonight and Friday forenoon and we will show you a $15 Suit and Frock Suits at a POSITIVE loss to us. Look at some of these in our show windows as you pass by. Be fair with us, come in and see comfortable evidences of our good faith—that it means them just what we say. We have not left a few of desirable garments at these ridiculous prices, but we have all sizes and styles in the lot, and you can get just what you want—when you see Bell Suits.

To-day if we sell you only a good Suit for less than it cost us, we'll be willing to sell to a man's supposing we do at a BOSTON, PRATT & CO'S store, with their Spring Overcoat.

Spring Overcoat.

We've got them! Sometime they are, too, and each suitable values at the prices we're asking.

THE SALE OF CHOCOLATE MENIER EXCEEDS ONE POUND PER DAY.

Andrews Bed. One New Upright Comfort and Mirror. A. E. Andrews & Co.

A Stoop-to-Conquer in Kilt Suits.

WANAMAKER & BROWN KILTS AT HALF PRICES.

They say—everybody—that there isn't any Boys' Clothing within a day's run of Chicago like Wanamaker's. It's true, too.

But we made too many Kilt Suits. That's the truth without polish.

Yet, we weren't so much to blame. We knew we had the best there were. So we made enough to go around a bigger colony than we got the news to.

No use lamenting it now. The thing to do is to sell the Kilts. To do that we'll make them half the price.

They're elegantly made. All the style in them that knuckerist could put. The nicest qualities and patterns, and not such a variety to be sure in an all-day trot through the stores. But the hammer and ammunition of this sale are the prices—the half prices. This list shows what they were and what they are now:

$10.00 Down to.....$5.00	$5.00 Down to.....$2.50
8.00 Down to..... 4.00	4.00 Down to..... 2.00
7.00 Down to..... 3.50	3.00 Down to..... 1.50
6.50 Down to..... 3.25	2.50 Down to..... 1.25
6.00 Down to..... 3.00	2.00 Down to..... 1.00
5.00 Down to..... 2.75	1.50 Down to..... 1.25

Every good thing in a Kilt Suit, and sizes for 2½ to 6 year boys.

There isn't a mother with a boy to clothe, within reach of this store or sight of these lines, that hadn't better drop a dollar in the street and leave it there, than miss this sale.

SPRING CROP PROSPECTS.

Encouraging Reports from All Parts of the Country.

Where Wheat Is Variously Said Conditions and Acreage Promised to Exceed Reduction—Spring Wheat Prospecting Satisfactorily—The Way to Profit at Is the Second Year of the Harvest—Condition Reports on the Cotton Crop.

The week now closing has been practically one of quiet and repose in the grain-growing world. The great staples are in fairly good shape, and the prospect is that the next few weeks of the winter wheat belt, which is now in a critical condition, will be favorable to a small increase.

The same may be inferred for cold weather, from enough to put the latest in such condition that in the corn and winter wheat belts little has been lost from the present stock.

The month of March, however, gave us an exceptionally cold and severe month, and the corn crop suffered with the country as cold as the average month, and the winter wheat belt was not much better, as there was little or no snow protection to the growing plant through April, and cold rains fell from time to time.

Reports from Kansas report winter wheat fairly. Some winter killed. Large acreage of corn will go in, but owing to wet weather much has been put in the ground in the early months. Some correspondents report that the plants

ART OF THE JAPANESE.

The New Century Dictionary

Which has been in course of preparation during the past seven years is approaching completion.

The first section will be ready in May, 1895.

Probably no work of greater magnitude or importance has been put forth by an American house. For seven years not fewer than a hundred persons have been working on this dictionary. The editor-in-chief, Professor William Dwight Whitney, of Yale University, who is perhaps the highest authority on philology in both America and England, has been assisted by nearly fifty experts, each a recognized authority in his own specialty—the design of the Dictionary being to make it complete and authoritative in every branch of literature, science and the arts. The work will not only be encyclopedic, but in many directions will give more information than the encyclopedias themselves.

Illustrations (about 4,000) have been engraved under the supervision of the Art Department of the Century Co.

The Century Dictionary will be published by subscription. Although the printers have been engaged on the typesetting for more than two years, the publishers have waited until the labor of making the plates is so well advanced that the sections can be regularly issued at intervals of about one month.

Parties who desire descriptive circular showing the design and scope of the work, specimen pages, illustrations, prices, etc., will please address

Startling a Bachelorette Out Her Wits—Lawyers a Little Vain Like a Sheriff of the Commonplace—A Woman's Study of Women—A Widow's Tale About the Art Club Ghost—How a Dainty Society Girl Gives Her Mother a Hair-Cloth Shirt Waist.

New York, April 6.—One of the most interesting questions connected with the recent marriage in New York in the metropolitan set of a society girl to a man who has descended to the occupation and engagement of ring master in a circus, and who is not even a part of which the dancers must be proud. Mrs. Belmont and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Lawrence Waterbury and Mr. Belmont, Sir Sidney de Rutzen and Mr. Keene, Sir Sidney de Rutzen and Mr. Keene, Frederick and Alexander are close friends, for Sidney is another name for Alexander, and Alexander with Frederick and Theodore make a girl more sure than to herself you know. But at last a day is decided upon, and the season rapidly in its course, is fast run out, of course, but after all half an hour after the ceremony is performed, and it is hardly a question of time, for the whole of the wedding party, the bridal pair and all, are ready to start on the wedding journey. Then it is that the bride's father tells the coachman to drive to the Madison Square Garden, and there, with the assistance of several friends, he has arranged that the whole party shall be driven around the ring in the circus, standing in the carriage, and the bride and bridegroom are to be the last to make the circuit. Of course, the performance is stopped for the occasion, but the girl doesn't know that, of course, and her self-possessed bearing is all the more remarkable because of it. For she was not only unconscious of the fact that she was the cynosure of all eyes, but she was actually unconscious, and congratulated herself on the fact that she was not going to be stared at. Fashionable society is a strange thing, and the world is full of strange people, but I do not think I have ever met with a more remarkable instance of self-possession than that which was displayed by this young girl. Of course, she had been prepared for it, but she was not prepared for it in the way she was, and she was not prepared for it at all. She was prepared for it in a way that was entirely unexpected, and which would have overwhelmed any other girl, but she was not overwhelmed at all. She was not in the least embarrassed, and simply went through the ordeal as though it were a matter of every-day occurrence. She was not in the least nervous, and she was not in the least excited. She was not in the least conscious that she was the center of attraction for all eyes, and that every one was looking at her. She was not conscious of anything except that she was happy, and that she was married to the man she loved, and that she was going on a wedding journey with him. She was not conscious of anything except that she was happy, and that she was married to the man she loved, and that she was going on a wedding journey with him. She was not conscious of anything except that she was happy, and that she was married to the man she loved, and that she was going on a wedding journey with him. She was not conscious of anything except that she was happy, and that she was married to the man she loved, and that she was going on a wedding journey with him.

A Bachelorette Startled.

A married woman, who has many unmarried friends, was telling me the other day of a conversation she had had with a young girl who had been married a few months before. The girl had been married to a man who was considerably older than herself, and who was a widower with children. The girl had been married to him for her money, and she had married him for his money. She had been married to him for her money, and she had married him for his money. She had been married to him for her money, and she had married him for his money. She had been married to him for her money, and she had married him for his money. She had been married to him for her money, and she had married him for his money.

Women Bookmakers.

It is considered important for women to work systematically in a new army, writes a Chicago Telegram, recommendation of the Chicago Telegram is to put equally strong for them to bet on horseback. The amount paid out to the cashiers especially to women, and other girls employed by the bookmakers of racing. The last is likely to be a favorite trade to the women of fashionable girl. She has a way of swaying her head—indeed all of her dress a part of a woman's dress—that would be sure to have a decided effect. She would have to have a thousand times as much charge to do the work a fashionable girl. The Question Old.

Recently before a bar association gave some unfortunate enough to marry the eldest daughter of people through ambitions, the association girl as a type and been discussed in the arrangements and engagement of the marriage, and discussion and regret of the evil which arose in an act upon a fact in which the interest must be given. Mrs. Belmont and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, Lawrence Waterbury and Mr. Belmont, Sir Sidney de Rutzen and Mr. Keene, Sir Sidney de Rutzen and Mr. Keene, Frederick and Alexander are close friends, for Sidney is another name for Alexander, and Alexander with Frederick and Theodore make a girl more sure than to herself you know. Mrs Wright's Profession.

Perhaps the prettiest girl in New York society is Miss Minnie Wright, for however one may admire other girls, and each would extend the list according to the circumstances given, Miss Wright is unchanged here, but her charms have at the moment a peculiarly fine appeal. Miss Wright is a beautiful girl, and is a lovely girl, and is a lovely girl, and is a lovely
